Although, the IYS was officially launched in July, the occasion provided another opportunity of highlighting the sanitation crisis in the country and the need to scale up successful models towards achieving the set targets for the year. The National launch of IYS has further demonstrated Federal Government's commitments to sanitation and hygiene development in the country and would motivate other states that have not yet endorsed the IYS plans to do so. Up to date, 24 States have endorsed the IYS plans and are implementing various activities in the State Action Plans.

Considering the late commencement of IYS activities in the country, the National Council on Water Resources has approved the proposal for adoption of 2009 as National Year of Sanitation in the country and would be presented to Federal Executive Council for approval. Also approved by the National Council on Water Resources among so many other memoranda are; the Implementation Guidelines for National Water-Sanitation Policy; and the Strategy for Scaling up Sanitation development in the country.
